Solar, so good

Resident talks about benefits of alternative energy

With solar rooftops emerging in the city here and there, residents of Adyar have gone one step ahead, as many such facilities can be seen in the neighbourhood.

V Balakrishnan, 79, a resident of Kalakshetra Colony, believes in going solar. He says this reduces the burden of electricity charges. It was a few years back Balakrishnan attended a two-day workshop and exhibition on solar energy, where he realised it as the cost-efficient way to meet power needs.

After the seminar, he

Solar, so... (from page1)

personally visited a solar industry in Salem and asked the people there to set up a panel at his house.

His wife Sumathi Balakrishnan, retired principal of Queen Mary's College, says, 'first we installed a solar heater and we saw the difference in the electricity bill. Later, we set up one solar rooftop panel. Only few lights and fans were connected to it and it was very efficient. Realising this, we decided to install more panels and now the electricity of the entire house is almost generated from these solar panels,' she adds.

Interestingly, Balakrishnan supplies electricity to the TNEB as well. He has installed two meters- one to monitor the energy supplied to the TNEB and the other to take note of power received to his house.

Balakrishnan has installed a 10x12 feet split solar panel with a capacity of 1.5KW. 'Earlier, I used to pay the bill up to Rs 2,000, but now it doesn't exceeds Rs 400.'

He further explains the benefits of passing on electricity to the grid instead of storing it in batteries. This set up can avoid any loss of electricity through discharge. And with this system, one does not need
